The Battle.

DENVER, August 27.—News special from Rangely, Colorado, 10 a. m., by courier to Glenwood Springs via Meeker. The fight occurred about six miles west of Rangely in a little cañon between the mountains. The Indians had planned an ambush but the scouts discovered it and retreated in time. The Indians then opened fire and Major Leslie's command and the scouts which were acting under Major Hooper's Aspen volunteers returned the fire from behind the rocks. The Indians [illegible] fought desperately. Upon the first concerted fire of the troops two Indians fell and one white man, Dr. Dumont of Meeker, with Kendall's band was wounded. For [illegible] hours

THE BATTLE RAGED [illegible]

incessantly. Then the Utes [illegible] fired during the day. It continued until 11 o'clock last night, but no one was injured. Jack Ward, one of Kendall's men, was killed during the first part of the fight. The whites saw eight Indians dragged behind the line. There were five whites wounded. Their names are not known at this time. Two of them were members of Hooper's company. One man was a scout and two are believed, although not known, to be soldiers. After the fight and the report is that they were going to pillage the ranches. They were not heading for the reservation. Men of the National guards, and in fact all the [illegible] are on foot. Their horses are all played out. A courier passed here this morning bound for Meeker after rations and hospital supplies. There is immediate demand for them. The men have barely had enough to eat.

THE INDIANS RETREATED,

Further [illegible]

CAMP ADAMS, MEEKER, Colo., Aug. 26, 11:45 a. m., via Glenwood Springs, August 27, 8 a. m.—A courier from the scouts has just arrived from Rangely, sixty five miles west of Meeker. He brings news of the first fight. The Utes opened fire first at 6:50 a. m. on August 23. Jack Ward, of Kendall's party, is killed and five men are wounded, two of the sheriff's party and three of the Colorado National guard, but whether mortally or not cannot be learned. Kendall deserves great credit. He was cool and collected and fought his men well. The Colorado National guard fought on a two and a half days' fast. There were forty of the troops and forty of the sheriff's men who engaged about 125 Utes. Three Utes are known to have been killed certainly and how many more is only a surmise. The Indians are attacking the ranches below and

and it is expected that the troops will have to go to their assistance. Pray, the captain of the scouts, had a horse shot from under him, but he is unhurt. Dr. Dumont of Meeker was wounded. Eight Indians were killed, three in the earlier part of the fight and five later. The hospital is well arranged and ready for occupancy in the Meeker school house. The hospital ambulance stands ready to start at this minute to move to the front. Assistant Surgeon Hughes marched with Leslie on August 24 and is with the troops at the front. Dr. Lauterman of Buena Vista left for the front on the night of August 24 and is probably there by this [illegible]

Meeker is as quiet as a funeral. Little groups on the streets have got wind of the news and are running with bated breath. Many who asserted last night with great gusto that the Utes were escaping and on the reservation are now thoroughly ashamed. The official dispatch states that the militia went into action calmly and fought coolly. When on troopers with more pluck than discretion charged on them. It is believed by Pray that there will be no more walking after Indians. The Utes will make a standing fight. The fight lasted all day on August 25, and when the scout courier left at 11 p. m. the rifles were still cracking. It is probable that has occurred to day, the 26th. It was expected that the Indians were largely reinforced, but Pray expected to reach Meeker [illegible] p. m. [illegible] Both the Utes [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] with [illegible] a hot sage brush. The condition of the [illegible] who laughed at this [illegible]

The Ambush.

MEEKER, Friday noon, August 26, via GLENWOOD SPRINGS, August 27.—(Special.)—Another stories told by Fred Elliott, who has just come to town from the front, come to the effect that the Utes made an unfortunate attempt to ambush Kendall and the troops. He says quite unexpectedly the Indians rode at railroad speed in front of the command and that some of the command took after them. The cooler headed of the command hallooed to them to come back or they would be killed, while others yelled to them to follow and kill the Indians. Three of the four white men who followed the Indians were wounded and the courier thought had the command given chase to the free Indians they

WOULD HAVE BEEN ROUTED.

Those who know that country claim that the fight [illegible] miles from the reservation line and that the country is very broken and full of deep ravines and gullies. The opinions of the people here at Meeker vary greatly. A great many think that the Utes were on their way to the reservation and there would have been no fight if they had been left alone. Others declare that the Indians were nearer the reservation at the time than is stated in the last reports. No record has been received other than when the fight occurred and that the Indians were heading for Bear mountain, a better fitted place for their kind of warfare, and that they had the [illegible] in route in the hope that they might

TAKE AN EFFECTIVE BLOW.

Jack Ward, the courier says, was shot through the left breast, the bullet deadling a vest button through him. He also authorizes the statement that Dr. J. J. Dumont of Meeker, one of the sheriff's posse, was dangerously wounded. Three of the Aspen men and one of the Colorado National guard are reported wounded. The dead in the Indian party has just been lowered to half mast in respect to the memory of Jack Ward. Ward is well known all over the state, having resided in Colorado for many years. His family are now at Grand Boire. He has lived in Gunnison, Park and other counties.

After the Battle.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, August 26.—Glenwood Springs, August 27.—The situation here since the battle of yesterday is growing more serious in some respects. To day fresh supplies reach us. Five of our men are wounded. Lieutenant Fetz is mortally wounded, shot in the arm. Two colored soldiers from Fort Duchesne have been sent in who report five companies of infantry including the Indians in check. They report about 500 Indians in the field. Jack Ward was buried this morning.

THE WOUNDED

are Lieutenant Folsom and Ed Foltz of Aspen, L. E. Steward and Dick Cafferty of Leadville, the latter not seriously, and Dr Dumont of Meeker. Dr Reid is caring for the wounded. Ed Foltz was shot through the neck. Major Leslie has just started with the two colored troopers to have a talk with the government troops, who are camped below here five companies strong. None of the boys are seriously wounded except Folsom. The best information to hand shows four Indians killed and three wounded. Three of the Utes were stacked up in a pile and some of our boys approached the bodies to when the Utes on an adjoining hill burned the ground around them with bullets. The fight lasted all day yesterday and the militia fought Indian style from behind rocks and trees. All are in good spirits. Major Leslie's action is commendable. Foltz, Stewart and Cafferty are armed ready for more fight. There is a little store owned by H. H. & Co., which the boys cleaned out in two hours. The stocks are in excellent shape but nearly out of ammunition. The five companies of regulars are between this camp and the Indians, holding them in check. Leslie wants them to leave so we can flank up the Utes. Reinforcements and supplies are looked for from the rear.

The Scene at Glenwood.

DENVER, August 27.—A Times special from Glenwood says: Governor Adams, Attorney General Marsh, Hon. G. G. Symes and Hon. Wm. Byers arrived at 7:30 p. m. yesterday. They were immediately engaged in consultation with County Commissioners Gregory and Reynolds and Hon. H. H. Eddy. The conference lasted until after ten o'clock, when an impromptu reception tendered the governor at Hotel Glenwood.

After the reception and the elegant spread were duly disposed of Governor Adams delivered a short address. While he was speaking Major Brooks informed him that a messenger had just arrived bringing information of the fight, and that Jack Ward, well known and greatly [illegible] in Glenwood had been killed. The governor closed his ringing speech with the public announcement of the death of Ward and A. [illegible] retired to a quarter to discuss the situation, while the governor [illegible]

Orders From Washington.

WASHINGTON, August 27.—Orders have been received from the war department to Colonel Merritt, commanding the troops in the Ute troubles, that he will be governed by instructions from the department of the Missouri. Army officers expect that the troops will be used in driving the Indians to the reservation, the conservation of the Indians commencing at Grand Creek. Advices received by the department from Colorado are to the effect that the troops will be used to prevent the carrying out of the attempt by state authorities to enforce civil process against the Indians. Gen. Crook has been authorized to talk with his subordinates and other persons who may be dismissed with the Indians regarding matters bearing on the relations of the Indians with Colorow after the conference with Gov. Adams.

[illegible]

DENVER, August 27.—A Times special from Rangely, August 27, says: The Utes are on the reservation and the commander of the forces at Fort Duchesne has agreed to join the U. S. marshal in restraining Colorow and his two Indians who are wanted by Sheriff Kendall. It has been agreed to by Leslie and Kendall and a courier dispatched to headquarters for an [illegible] of the war department. The Utes and Colorow and his West and Northern Brandon have crowded the whites with glory.

[illegible] the D. & R. G.

DENVER, August 27.—Judge Hallett to day rendered a decision regarding the right of the Rio Grande road to cut timber on the public lands under certain circumstances. In this school the government sues for the value of timber taken from public lands and defendants justify taking on the ground of congress. The facts are to the alleged trespasses being in dispute, the matter for consideration is the proper construction of the act of congress. In the year 1870 it is shown that in the first year the D. & R. G. Railway Co. was incorporated under the general law of the territory of Colorado relating to corporations, and thereafter built a road and operated it until some time in the year 1880, when the property was sold under foreclosure proceedings to a new company, defendant in the second suit, and the present owner. June 5, 1872, congress granted to the railroad company right of way over and through the domain, and the right to take from public lands adjacent thereto stone, timber, earth, water and other material required for the construction and repair of its roads and telegraph line. The act is the same section and subject to the provision that said company shall complete its railway to a point on the Rio Grande southern Santa Fe within five years of the passage of this act, and shall complete fifty miles additional south of said point in each year thereafter, and in default their rights and privileges herein granted shall be rendered null and void as far as respects unfinished portions of said road. (17 Stat. 339.)

By act of March 3, 1875, (19 Stat. 415,) the time mentioned in the proviso was extended ten years. The road was not completed to a point on the Rio Grande southern Santa Fe within the ten years, it is agreed that the road built within that time the grant came to an end June 5, 1882.

In general the trespasses complained of in this case (timber from government lands) are justified under another act of congress approved March 3, 1875, entitled "An act granting to railroads right of way through the public lands of the United States." It, however, the right of a railroad company and of a railroad company as a successor in interest to take timber from public lands under the act of 1872 and 1875 be questioned, a more difficult question is presented as to what are adjacent lands within the meaning of those act. The actions here in each case that the timber was cut from lands adjacent to the line of railway as it was then or afterwards constructed, and they have been careful to state whether the timber was taken from lands adjacent to the line built before or after June 5, 1882. The timber in the first suit was cut from lands near the town of Montrose, in Montrose county, between October 1, 1882, and November 1, 1883. Some of it was taken to Utah territory for the use of the Denver & Rio Grande Western company, and a small quantity was used in building cars. The remainder was appropriated to bridge building and other permanent structures on the road, and the location of such structures with reference to the place from which the timber was taken is not stated.

The second action is for timber cut in Gunnison county between January 1 and November 1, 1885. It was made into ties, one fourth of which had been used for repairs on lines built prior to June 8, 1882, one fourth for new structures on such lines, and the line of road completed subsequent to June 8, 1882, and one half for the new line now in process of construction between Montrose and Ouray. As in the other case, it appears that a considerable part has been carried to a place remote from the place of cutting, and the location of the remainder with reference to the place of cutting is not stated. Obvious, the statements of fact were prepared with a view to put on the question concerning right of defendants to take timber from public lands under the act of 1875. Whether the timber was taken under the act of 1872 or that of 1875 the same question is presented as to the rights of the company to use it anywhere on its lines. In other words, whether timber must be used in a place adjacent to that from which it was taken or may be used in any place which the company can [illegible] it. Nothing has

KILLED BY THE CARS.

An Indian Run Over Yesterday Morning and Dies in the Afternoon.

Last Sunday morning R. A. Torrey, a foreman, was run over on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad near the coal chute to the freight depot and instantly killed. Yesterday morning another accident equally as fatal occurred. In the past three months an Indian by the name of Jose Frontera has been at work on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad in this city as a section hand. He arrived from Italy four months ago and has a wife and family living in Denver. Yesterday morning about seven o'clock he left the section house near the Midland bridge and walked up the track in the direction of the freight depot. Just as he reached the road shade the regular freight train was rapidly approaching. The king to be at a low speed than, he left the track and leaned against the shute. The broad gauge cars came so close to the shute that they fairly rubbed against it. The unfortunate man was struck with great force on the head and thrown under the cars. The left foot was severed just above the ankle and the right foot was nearly taken off just below the knee. He also sustained some internal injuries. When picked up he was in a conscious condition and stated in broken English that he was struck by the big cars. The injured man was taken to the Manitou hotel where a physician was summoned and his injuries attended to. He refused to allow his limbs to be amputated and died about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The remains will be interred in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. J. D. O'Harte left on the late train last evening for Leadville on a three days' fishing trip, and also to visit his family who have been at Leadville for the past ten days.

Mr. W. H. Dozier, a well known Denver and Boston real estate man, is at the Antlers yesterday.

Mr. R. D. Weir, clerk of the Iron Springs hotel, expects to join in Manitou during the coming winter. He has a sister in the east who will join him and they will probably take a cottage.

Mr. Archie Williams, jr., of Topeka, leaves for his home this morning where he will visit for a couple of weeks before returning to his winter studies at the Kemper Family institute at Boonville, Missouri.

The Cliff house office and porches were crowded with good looking and handsomely dressed ladies last night. The Cliff is again full with people, many of whom have apartments engaged until the house closes late in the fall.

Mr. John Cairo, who owns the book store near the Barker house, has instituted a lottery which he buys back all books sold at half price after they have been read, provided they are properly preserved. This practically amounts to a circulating library and in fact is better for tourists.

Mr. Sanford of the Iron Springs company has contracted to build twelve cottages on lots in the Iron Springs hotel during the coming winter, none to cost less than $2,000. Five of the cottages are for lawyers. He says the company has partly decided to add a hundred rooms to the hotel.

United States Senator Daniel W. Voorhees of Indiana, accompanied by ex-Congressman John E. Lamb of Terre Haute and a distinguished party of gentlemen from Garden City, Kan., arrived at the Iron Springs hotel last night. Senator Voorhees will join Mrs. his daughter and will remain in Manitou some days.

The trouble between Manitou and the Iron Springs company is still raging and is more fun to the guests at the hotel than a cage of monkeys would be. Yesterday Jones built a stairway across the road leading up to the hotel which branches off from the main road below the spring. It stood there at the hour last night, although the workmen had been ordered to have it removed.

The GAZETTE reporter took the opportunity last Friday to visit the Manitou Grand Caverns for the first time this season. Congressman Symes improved the opportunity for making a speech at Glen Wood Springs, and gave a lengthy account of his thirty years experience with the Indians.

At least one life, and perhaps more, has been uselessly sacrificed. A wholly unnecessary war has been provoked. It is a [illegible] of regret that the [illegible] did not earlier secure a personal interview. As we said last Sunday, the troops never should have been permitted to have left Washington to take the field against the Indians. It was a blunder to have called them out, it will be a crime when there was no occasion for it to have allowed them to take the field. We all know how [illegible] the chances of a war were increased by the presence of soldiers and [illegible] There was not the slightest [illegible] of the savages going out from Washington. There was nothing for them to protect outside. So far as Kendall was concerned there was no necessity of siding him. He went out with a force which was at least [illegible] to one of the Indians and ought to have been able to take care of himself. It is rather remarkable that his eight days' hunt for the Indians was [illegible] and he should be found himself [illegible]. If he shall be brought on this side he will have a terrible tale to tell.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

Scribner's Magazine for September opens with a fully illustrated article on "The Modern Nile" by Edward L. Wilson one of the most enthusiastic and skillful of travellers and photographers.

The Rev. W. S. Ransford, D. D., the rector of St. George's church, New York City, who is well known as a lover of all kinds of healthy manly athletic sports, has contributed to the magazine a very entertaining account of some of his experiences with the oar and rowing in the Shenandoah. Dr. Ransford has made a number of mountaineering tours in the Rocky mountains since 1866 and has included in the article some very robust practical advice to those contemplating similar trips.

At the opening of the college year the thoughtful essay on "The Development of the American University" by Prof. George T. Ladd of Yale will be read with unusual care and profit by those interested in the subject of higher education. Professor Ladd has outlined with considerable detail a general scheme for primary, secondary, and university education.

Curacao, a quaint old Dutch city that seems out of place in the western hemisphere is sketched by Dr. W. F. Hutchinson in the September number of the American Magazine.

"Our New Navy," as described by Lieutenant W. S. Hughes, certainly bids fair to be serviceable to a limited extent. It is a good beginning, if nothing more. The time that will be required for the completion of even this small fleet is worth noting.

Since the Canadians have had to shift for themselves in military affairs, they have created a strong and effective system of militia, with a nucleus of regiments in constant service. The extent and thoroughness of this system, and the hold it has acquired in all parts of the dominion, are surprising facts, as detailed by J. Macdonald Oxley in The American Magazine.

MAGAZINE FOR SEPTEMBER

The September number of Harper's Magazine opens with an attractive article on "Driving in New York," by a New Yorker, illustrated with a number of spirited illustrations from T. de Thulstrup. The writer reviews the growth of horsemanship in the metropolis, and pleasantly describes the prevailing fashion of riding, and the facilities afforded, this season, in the parks and roads of the city.

Mr. O'Malley's "Mary Anne," is drawing steadily to a close, and "April Hopes" skillfully develops the plot of his lovers.

A STRAY TRUNK

A Little Denver Romance

[illegible]

Yours truly, [illegible]

[illegible] Colorado [illegible] Denver long [illegible] corruption. My cream [illegible] impositions [illegible] which [illegible] Denver. I was [illegible] keeping back for bail in the [illegible] front. No — Water street. My [illegible] fast [illegible] and a room. I preferred myself. My [illegible] I always took an hotel or [illegible] wherever part of town I [illegible] to be and as to my tea. I [illegible] ally took that at the house of an Eng[illegible] I had known at home.

I shall be pardoned for this digression when it is understood that to my mind of life I am indebted for the [illegible] of the story.

Had I been a man of business now with a regular and methodical course of duties things could not have taken such a singular course with me.

By one of those singular conjunctions of circumstances which make or mar the fate of mortals I happened to be passing the express office one day, at a time when the accumulation of unclaimed articles was being sold at public auction. A man of leisure does many things without a motive. I crowded in among the throng of sharp-faced Jews and shrewd Yankees scrambling for bargains. The articles offered were, if I except a package of last year's almanacs and a gum cane, exclusively personal baggage—portmanteaus carpet-sacks and trunks.

There were of the latter an unusual number, all very pretentious "Saratogas" of that cheap and shabby build which to my mind, suggested [illegible] the intention to [illegible] on boarding house keepers than the likelihood of a romance.

These things had probably not been lost, but been brought by their owners, who had of [illegible] the [illegible] ample date for estimating their value, not worth the cost of the charges, and so had been [illegible] The selling was spirited, and the [illegible] as [illegible] yet it was clear the expressmen [illegible] cared to [illegible] at which they were knocked off were [illegible] very low.

Among them all I saw nothing but the vulgar and common rubbish of boarding houses and, sick with the atmosphere of trade I was turning to go out when a unique little hair trunk was thrown on the platform. In another moment, there being no other bidders, it was knocked off to me with a good deal of laughter from the crowd. It had a great brass escutcheon lock, which was what first caught my eye. I have a fancy for antiques, and moreover, I saw, or thought I saw, a coat of arms graven on the brass.

[illegible] I had [illegible] of hours and, engaging to have it [illegible] I turned away and walked down to the depot to see the eastern train [illegible]

Of course I was not foolish enough to suppose I had gotten a fortune for a few shillings. I knew perfectly well that any package of real value would be traced up and recovered, but the vicissitudes of fortune might yet leave something at least interesting to such a fate as the auction block. I kept thinking about that singular little trunk and wondering what I should make out of that obscure coat of arms—wondering if there was in Denver any book on heraldry which would show me to what family it had originally belonged, till at last the pangs of hunger reminded me that I was missing my dinner and I turned into the first restaurant I came to. What I ate is of no consequence. It was a cheap place where the cooking was not appetizing, and I ate but little. I had just called for my bill, being still seated at the table, when a singular creature with a lonesome, hunted look came into the room, stepping swiftly, yet furtively withal to fill most obscure seat, as it she wished to avoid observation. Of course such a mysterious manner at once fixed my attention. I called for dessert, and as I ate it watched her.

Her attire was much worn, but had about it that elegant simplicity and neatness of detail which evince the refinement of high breeding and natural good taste.

She drew a pair of worn and mended gloves from her hands, dainty hands they were, but like her face, not clean. She looked at them with evident chagrin. The condition of her hair, not less than her face and hands, seemed to render it probable that she had either been travelling a long distance or that she had lately lodged in some place where no [illegible]

When she entered I had noticed she bore a rather large bundle. This she placed in the chair beside her. She drew a handkerchief from her pocket to wipe her lips. Like her hands and face, it was soiled from long use, and like them it occasioned her disgust.

I was thankful to see her select the farthest corner to use. If she had looked on her condition with tolerance, I should have despised her, for a woman carelessness of her person is to me the most disagreeable of beings. Evidently she was very tired and quite as evidently she was a woman, or let me say a girl, of great refinement.

Though not beautiful, she was exceedingly interesting in her features. She was, perhaps, of medium height, but slight, and of a general spiritualic cast. Her eyes must have been very beautiful, being so large and dark, but now they had that lonesome, hunted defeated look, to me very painful. It is a look I have frequently noted in both men and women in here in the west where, the unsuccessful, the things of home seem so hopelessly far away.

The waiter did not approach her in good style to take her orders, for he had the shrewdness to see she was a person he might neglect with impunity. The great paper in which her bundle was wrapped permitted a part of it to protrude. The leg of a pair of pantaloons was visible. There could be no mistake. Who could it mean? She counted her money, which, little as it was seemed to give her some trouble and presently called the waiter to her. The unmannerly fellow laughed in her face and, turning toward me said "Perhaps this gent speaks [illegible] I don't—this ain't no French hotel."

"No no" [illegible] confusedly deprecating with an impatient motion of the hand his rude appeal in a third person. "I ask you but you speak [illegible] Francais [illegible]

Mr. Frank A. Clark yesterday closed a contract with Mr. Reuben Berry whereby the latter agrees to erect a building in Colorado City in which Mr. Clark will open a first class restaurant. The building is to be completed and ready for occupancy by October 1st.

[illegible], acting under [illegible] made at the last meeting of the city [illegible] put men at work yesterday to cut down the rank growth of weeds on North and South Park places. These short strips of land in the Denver & Rio Grande passenger depot from Pike's Peak avenue and have lately presented a lamentable contrast to the richness and beauty of Park place.

Miss Mary S. Martin who has been spending the summer on a ranch near Denver returned to the city yesterday. [illegible] will be one of the teachers in the public schools in this city during the coming school year.

Mr. Charles O. Nyt [illegible] resigned the position of head cook at the Grand View hotel since it was opened. He has purchased the furniture and fixtures of the O. K. restaurant and will open Saturday next. Mr. Nyt has had a long experience in the restaurant line, having been connected with several of the best hotels in this city. He was also chief cook on Mr. Jay Gould's yacht a few years ago.

County Commissioner David McShane was in the city yesterday. He has not begun work on his contract with the Denver, Texas & Gulf railroad but is finishing up some work for the Denver & Santa Fe railroad. This work includes the grading for a large switch and [illegible] of the county road near Palmer Lake, which the building of the road has necessitated. He expects to have all this work completed in a few days and he will then move his outfit to Texas.

Rev. J. H. Merritt and wife celebrated the twenty fifth anniversary of their wedding in Denver Friday evening. A large number of their friends were present and the occasion was one of much enjoyment and pleasure. Mr. Merritt resided in this city several years ago and at one time occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church. He is at present the presiding elder of the northern Colorado conference. Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Peck of this city attended the anniversary and returned yesterday.

Deputy Sheriff Waite received a letter from Sheriff Dana yesterday dated at Moffat August 23rd in which Mr. Dana stated that nearly all the members of Company A were at the front except Mr. J. M. Bulton, himself and one or two others. He expected them to be ordered to escort a pack train to the front. The boys had seen no Indians up to that time, and he thought that the savages were further and further away from the troops. All the boys were in good health, but some of the horses had played out on the long and rapid ride.

Postmaster Love is busily engaged in getting ready for carrying for the free delivery system, which goes into operation in this city on Sept. 1st. He recommends that all persons who intend to have mail delivered by the carriers should put up iron letter boxes near their gates. This would save them considerable expense, and greatly assist the carriers in the proper distribution of the mail. The carriers have been kept quite busy during the past week in [illegible] for the members of the various [illegible] of their respective routes. The postmaster thinks that the operation of the system will not be [illegible] in this city as was anticipated. As far as the work of the office force is concerned it will rather be [illegible] than diminished when the system goes into effect.

Mr. Edward Harrigan and his company, from their own theatre in New York, together with Dave Braham and his orchestra are booked to open the season at the opera house following the engagement at the Tabor Grand opera house, Denver. The company will appear in Mr. Harrigan's popular play entitled "The Leather Patch." This is one of the strongest plays in Mr. Harrigan's extensive repertoire. The New York Daily Graphic says: "From the rise to the fall of the curtain the fun was intense and incessant. Mr. Harrigan's Irishman is always kindly, never malignant. Neither Irishman, nor American, nor Hebrew, nor negro can take offense at his genial satires." Mr. Harrigan carries all of the scenery and properties of his plays and they will be mounted the same as they were in New York, where they enjoyed such long runs.

Two attempted hold ups occurred last Wednesday evening which were only made public yesterday. One occurred about 10 o'clock, on Bijou street. A young man who had been visiting on Wahsatch avenue was returning home and as he was coming up the hill from the avenue he was approached by a heavy set man and knocked over the head with a sand bag which partially stunned him. He had a revolver in his pocket which he instantly reached for and [illegible] the report the man hastily decamped. The other affair occurred in the south park about 11 o'clock, where a young colored man by the name of Martin was told to throw up his hands by two rough looking men near the middle of the park. He did not wait for them to accomplish their object but ran off, and related his adventure to the police. No arrests have as yet been made.

The firm of Fairley Bros. were [illegible] out of $10 in a very clever manner a few evenings ago. A man came to them and stated that his brother, who resides at H. P. Top station on the M. Pacific near Buena Vista, had just died and he had come down on the train for the purpose of purchasing a coffin. He answered every question regarding the cause of death, age, name, etc., and he looked [illegible]. He asked what it was worth and upon being told that it would cost $25, he wanted a cheaper one. [illegible] which [illegible] at Hill Top. He told Mr. [illegible] that he had not ready money of his own and was compelled to borrow the money from the store keeper. His story being very plausible and his manner so frank, Mr. Fairley gave him the money, but told him that he would go with him to see the corpse in the coffin, which he was to be shipped in the M. Pacific [illegible] for the train. [illegible] to his business. The coffin was taken to the [illegible] and [illegible] Mr. Fairley [illegible] which brought it back to the store.
